

animal. He didn't realize that everything in this world is connected and that he, himself, was part of the experiment. As a result, it ended in tragedy.

I believe this is a story for our modern age, and it has a lesson not just for science but for all human endeavor. How many of our problems today have been caused by beautiful ideas that failed to take into account the larger human dimensions?

As you make your way in the world, my advice to you is always keep in mind the human
