

General Guidance for Disability Documentation

The following general guidelines may be used to assist in determining qualifying documentation. All documentation will be evaluated on a case-case basis.

1. A Qualified Professional

Documentation should be provided by a licensed or otherwise properly credentialed professional who has undergone appropriate and comprehensive training, has relevant experience, and has no personal relationship with the individual being evaluated. Documention completed by a family member, even when otherwise qualified, is not appropriate and will not be accepted name, title, and professional credentials of the evaluator should be included on letterhead, typed in English, dated, and signed. Information licensure or certification, including the area of specialization, employment, and the state in which the individual practices, should also be clearly stated.

2. A Clear Statement of the Diagnosis

Acceptable documentation includes a clear diagnostatement that describes what the condition is along with present symptoms that meet the criteria for diagnosis. In most cases, this requires utilizing the current versions of the Diagnostic Statistical Manual of the American Psychiatric Association (DSM) national Classification of Diseases (ICD). Please note that a diagnosis does not automatically warrant approval of requested accommodations.

3. Current Functional Limitations

4. Recommendations for Accommodations

The documentation should contain recommendations for accommodations as appropriate. A request for accommodation should be accompanied with a clear rationale for its negestatumentation should establish a clear link between the requested accommodation and the functional limitation it seeks to alleviate. While recommendations from professionals with a history of working with the student provide valuable information, the Cdlege has no obligation to adopt recommendations that would fundamentation requirements.

5. Entirety of Information

All information provided during the process will be considered when determining appropriate accommodations. This includes batriot limited a self-report from the student regarding their limitation and impairments, corroborating documentation from external sour and impressions and conclusions formed by the ARS Director during intake interviewith students. It is possible the student could be determined "disabled" but not qualify for any specific accommodations because there is no evidence of educational limitations as a result of the diagnosed conditionwill rest upon ARS to make the final determination regarding which accommodation(s) are appropriate to the academic environment of Pomona College.
